Tasting Notes:

As varieties go, both Roussanne and Marsanne have a history of obscurity, and are not well known outside the Rhone Valley in France. Both cultivars are far better known for components of blends than a standalone wine. Together these two varieties produce a wine of distinction. Marsanne gives this blend delicate aromas of toasted almonds, fullness, and subtle citrus flavors. While Roussanne has unique lemon drop and tea like aromas. This wine can be paired with seafood, poultry, and light salads.
